THE ROYAL DRAWING SOCIETY'S WAR-TIME COMPETITION

WITH schools settled down to war-time conditions, normal activities, including art work, are in full swing. The War-time Competition, which may be regarded as an assessment of the most promising talent in the various schools participating, has steadily increased in entries and this year shows a marked advance on its predecessors. Much of the work was of high merit and notable for revealing those qualities of observation, memory, imagination and appreciation of colour which the Society aims at fostering.

Illustration, landscape and design were the most popular classes and in these there was keen competition. The judges welcomed especially the drawings and paintings from Overseas schools, many of which were of great interest.
